

f Jason E. Harman
📍 Holly River State Park

After eating a mess of ramps at the annual Ramp Feed in Pickens, we decided to take the road less traveled on our way home. We crossed an old railroad grade and headed over the mountain towards Holly River. We continued straight down the mountain into the state park, following signs to the waterfall. This was our first visit to this particular waterfall, so we cautiously made our way down the trail, hearing the rush of water get closer and closer. The upper falls soon came into sight - and the size was amazing to be coming from such a small stream. We spent 30-40 minutes just sitting there, watching and hearing the water tumble down from one level to the next. I set my camera on a rock in the stream and used a remote control to snap the shutter for this shot. It was tricky, but I'm so glad to have this picture to remember the time we spent at Upper Falls.

f Jeffrey Almond
📍 Pendleton County

f Nick D'Amico
📍 Summersville Lake

🐦 TravelMindset
📍 Stonewall Lake
Stonewall Lake is one of my top 6 most-do adventures in West Virginia!